

Prescription Assistance Programs (PAPs) are programs offered by drug companies, states or other organizations to provide free or low-cost medications to patients who cannot afford their medicines.

Here is a list of some PAP resources that are available. Visit their web sites or call to see if you qualify.

- Rx Help for You: 1-866-960-9497 or www.rxhelp4u.com
This program is open to low income people who are uninsured or under-insured and meet guidelines, including Medicare recipients.
- NeedyMeds: www.needymeds.org
This site can help you find and apply for PAPs offered by drug companies and states, including assistance for Medicare and Medicaid recipients.
- BenefitsCheckUp: www.BenefitsCheckUp.org
This site can help you find and apply for PAPs offered by drug companies and states, including assistance for Medicare and Medicaid recipients.
- Boehringer Ingelheim Patient Assistance Programs: 1-800-556-8317 or http://us.boehringer-ingelheim.com/our_responsibility/patients_families.html
These programs are open to qualifying patients on limited incomes, including Medicare recipients.
- The Partnership for Prescription Assistance (PPARX): 1-888-477-2669 or www.PPARX.org
PPARX helps patients find PAPs they may qualify for, including programs for Medicare and Medicaid recipients.

You can also ask your healthcare provider (HCP) or pharmacist to recommend other PAPs you may be qualified for. You may be able to sign up for more than one.
